

What Does My CEO Do All Day?: Apathy, Ineptitude, and Excessive Pay at the Top

Paying off huge mortgages. Buying vacation homes. Joining country clubs. Writing personal checks for private college tuition. Taking kick-ass vacations every year. What do CEOs do all day to earn such massively disproportionate rewards? Now that's a million dollar question. The answer, it turns out, is not much. At least not at my company, which churned through three CEOs in thirteen years. Each was a failure. So how did they manage to get rewarded so handsomely? Now that's a million dollar question. If only I had it.
