

What I Did to Sell More Kindle Books on Amazon

Direct response expert Diana Loera shows you how to utilize proven direct response marketing strategies to increase your book sales. It sounds very easy to make money by selling a book but once you have a book published you find that the playing field isn't level. There are authors making money each week and there are others who won't make even one sale. To be successful you need a proven strategy but strategies take time, money and expertise to develop. Many successful authors tout the value of having an established email list of fans who are eager to snap up your next book. But what if you don't have an email list? Diana walks you through how to build brand recognition for your book. Her strategy is written for non-fiction writers but fiction writers will find valuable information in the marketing section and both non-fiction and fiction writers will find value in her established list of resources. Don't have a book topic? No worries as Diana shares with you a list of possible topic ideas that you are free to claim as your own. Overwhelmed by the idea of actually marketing a book since you're a writer not a marketer? No worries. Diana's strategy is laid out so almost anyone can follow it and she also offers a lifeline as backup by including her personal contact email if you have marketing questions after reading her book.

If you've read this far you're probably looking for help and guidance so you can make money with your book. Buy this book now seriously, the small amount that you spend now will be well worth it to have Diana's marketing expertise laid out in an easy-to-follow book.
