

J.M.W. Turner, The Greatest of Landscape Painters: Watercolors from London Museums

Watercolors by the renowned 19th-century visionary, Joseph Mallord William Turner, illuminate the British artists impact on his younger contemporary, American Thomas Moran. An essay by Richard Townsend fully outlines for the first time Turners conceptual, compositional, and stylistic influence on Moran. Turners influence spanned Morans lifetime, from boyhood, when he studied Turners prints, to his tours as an adult of the same sites where Turner had drawn decades before. Additional contributions include an overview of Turners life and art by Andrew Wilton, a discussion of the impact on Moran of Turners historic landscapes by David Blayne Brown, and an examination of the displays of the Turner Bequest in London during the 1850s and 60s, which Moran visited, by Ian Warrell. Judith Walsh provides a comparative examination of the watercolor techniques of both artists.
